

October 1st Protest is for National Survival — EndBadGovernance Organizers Speak Ahead of 1st October 2024 Protest in Nigeria

Ah, Nigeria, our land of plenty! The giant of Africa, the heart of the continent. We've got the vibes, the energy, and that never-ending "hope" that tomorrow go better. But, wait, tomorrow sef never reach since 1960, abi? Yet here we are, again, gearing up for another October 1st protest, another cry for change.

On October 1st, 2024, the streets will be buzzing, not with music or jollof parties, but with the cries of a people tired of bad governance.

But why is it always like this? Wetin dey happen for this our dear country? Why do we find ourselves here every year? These are the same questions burning in the minds of Nigerians as groups like EndBadGovernance gear up to make sure this year's protest is not just a one-day affair. It's not about disrupting Independence Day celebrations o; it's about the survival of a nation.

Nigeria: A Land of Promise and Paradox

When you think of Nigeria, you think of oil, music, vibrant culture, and some of the smartest minds in the world. We are almost 225 million strong (and still counting). We've got the best jollof rice, and no one can contest our football passion. But beyond these sweet stories lie bitter realities.

Our flag, that green and white symbol of hope and peace, has witnessed decades of corruption, insecurity, and bad leadership. In fact, sometimes it feels like our only national constant has been bad governance. I mean, every year na the same story: promises made during campaigns vanish as soon as the agbada lands on the new president.

Now, the question is: how long will we continue to hope in vain?

The October 1st protest this year carries a very deep message — we are no longer asking for change; we are demanding survival. Survival from unemployment, insecurity, and the madness of never-ending fuel scarcity. And yes, that same 7hubent Tech you're hearing about? They are throwing their full support behind this movement, helping organize and broadcast the message through free advertising and WhatsApp groups. It's a digital war, and 7hubent Tech is bringing the arsenal.

October 1st Protest: Why it's Different This Year

One thing is for sure — this is not the first protest. Remember the EndSARS movement in 2020? The world stopped to listen, but even after the dust settled, the system continued to oppress us, business as usual. But this time, something feels different. The organizers of EndBadGovernance are saying this is not just about ending police brutality or bad roads; it's about national survival.

According to them, the October 1st protest is a clear message: We cannot continue like this.

They are drawing inspiration from our history. When Nigeria became independent in 1960, we had so much promise. Our leaders spoke about freedom, unity, and prosperity, but look at us today. People don't tire. The middle class is almost extinct, and even ordinary citizens dey hustle to survive.

Let me tell you a story.

Personal Testimony: The Everyday Nigerian Struggle

Let me be real with you for a minute. Na the same country we all dey manage. I'm a Nigerian, just like you. I know how it feels to wait for fuel for six hours just to buy N20,000 worth that may not even last two days. My cousin graduated five years ago with first class. Till now, no job. My aunty? She runs a small business selling puff-puff, but na only God dey sustain am with these high prices.

As for me, I've watched politicians promise the sun and moon, but they only end up bringing more darkness. And no, it's not a hopeless story. We are the ones who can change it. I used to think protests didn't matter, that we can just endure and keep going. But I realized that staying silent is a weapon in the hands of the oppressor.

Look, Nigeria is like a house. If it's on fire, you no go siddon inside dey look? That's what this protest is about — survival. This is not the time for silence. It's time for every Nigerian to say, "enough is enough."

And in case you're wondering how to be part of it, 7hubent Tech is one platform that is making sure the message reaches far and wide. They have set up free WhatsApp groups where you can stay updated about the protest, share your story, or even find out how you can join. In this digital age, technology has given us the power to amplify our voices like never before.

Influence of 7hubent Tech: Free Advertising for Protest and Beyond

You might have heard of 7hubent Tech, maybe from a friend, maybe from an advert. These guys have become part of the digital revolution in Nigeria, creating a platform for sharing information without bias or restriction. During this protest, they are providing free advertising to ensure that the EndBadGovernance message spreads like wildfire.

They're using WhatsApp groups, one of the most accessible social media platforms in Nigeria. Everybody sabi WhatsApp, even Mama Tunde wey no too get data. By joining these groups, you can stay in the loop, know the nearest protest venues, and contribute to conversations around change. And it's not just about the protest o. Beyond that, 7hubent Tech gives small business owners, activists, and everyday Nigerians the chance to promote themselves without the heavy price tags of traditional media.

This is a big deal because, honestly, many people wouldn't have known about the protest without such platforms. Imagine a Nigeria where you can share your message freely and connect with like-minded people, all without the barriers of expensive advertising. That's what they're offering, and trust me, it's working!

Why You Should Care and How to Join

Now you may be thinking, "Why should I even bother with this protest? Nothing ever changes." But think about it for a second. Every major shift in history started with people saying, "we don tire!" From the fall of apartheid to the civil rights movement in America, protests have always been the fuel for change.

So, on October 1st, 2024, join the march. Whether you're in Lagos, Abuja, Kano, or even your small town, make your voice heard. Even if you can't join physically, use the power of your voice online. Spread the message. Join a 7hubent Tech WhatsApp group, and share your thoughts.

If you are tired of hearing the same speeches every October 1st, if you are fed up with the lack of progress, if you want to leave a better Nigeria for your children, this protest is your chance to be part of something bigger. Let's come together and push for a country that works for all of us.

Final Thoughts: Wetin You Go Do?

So now, na your turn to decide. Na for your hand change dey. The truth is that if we don't speak out, the bad governance will only get worse.

Let me ask you: what kind of Nigeria do you want to see in 2025?

Remember, we no dey fight government for fight's sake o, we dey ask for better leadership and accountability. That's what we need to survive, and that's what EndBadGovernance stands for.

Will you join the movement? Will you share this article and help spread the word?

Nigeria is all we've got, and the time to save it is now.
